

NORAH KATHLEEN O'NEILL

Dr. Norah Kathleen O'Neill is the Director of the Southern Regional Education Board's (SREB) Learning-Centered Leadership Program, in Atlanta, Georgia. She most recently served as an Associate Professor in Education Policy Studies and the Director of Instructional Technology at Georgia State University. Dr. O'Neill received her Ed.D. from the University of Georgia, M.Ed. (Chemistry) from Armstrong Atlantic State University, M.Ed. (Administration and Supervision) from Georgia Southern University, and B.S. (Chemistry) from Edinboro University. Dr. O'Neill has more than 30 years of experience working at all levels of education, from classroom teacher to superintendent to higher education, and now in the non-profit sector. She specializes in futures studies and research concerning how leadership preparation and development must change in this time of higher standards and greater accountability and how technology will continue to change teaching and learning. Dr. O'Neill has given numerous presentations and workshops both locally and nationally. Her message to educators and to communities as a whole challenges them to think about how education must change to prepare all learners, both children and adults, for the future. She is married, has two grown children and four grandchildren.
